Surety bonds or guarantees protect businesses against losses resulting from a contractor or supplier's failure to meet their obligations. QBE offers dependable and innovative surety and guarantee solutions right around the world.

Surety and guarantee

A surety bond or guarantee is a promise to pay one party (the beneficiary) an agreed sum should a second party (the principal or contractor) fail to meet an obligation such as fulfilling the terms of a contract. The surety bond protects the beneficiary against losses resulting from the contractor's failure to meet that obligation.

Surety bonds are widely used in the construction industry, where businesses need financial comfort that projects will be completed on time and to budget. In addition, surety bonds are a feature in many other industries and can be used to guarantee a wide range of commercial obligations even including a company's regulatory or statutory duties.
